From Father Tom's Desk

The Ministry of Hospitality

Bob Edmunds, my former colleague in the church where I used to serve in Elmira, New York, tells a story of what it feels like to be denied hospitality. He and his family were vacationing one summer and decided to worship at a prominent church in the Washington D. C. area. Apparently this church had quite a reputation for the quality of their preaching and corporate worship. The reputation held up, according to Bob and Susan's standards. And believe me, they have rather high ones. The sermon was riveting and the music, inspiring. That much did not disappoint them. But the lack of hospitality did.

From the moment they arrived at that church to the time they left, not one person spoke to them - except for the pastor who made a feeble attempt on their way out the door. No one directed them to the nursery. They had to find it themselves. No one invited them to the fellowship hall for coffee and refreshments afterwards. They had to find it themselves. In fact Bob deliberately stood underneath the huge chandelier in the center of that spacious hall for at least five minutes - gazing up at it and looking as conspicuous as possible. But no one came up to him or introduced themselves to him.

"We felt as though we were invisible," Bob says. "No one noticed that we were even there. I don't care how good the preaching and music were. Nothing could have made up for their lack of hospitality. That church was as cold and lifeless as a corpse."

J. Scott Miller, The Ministry of Hospitality

Father: Modern Proverbs

Well-trained is the son who can hang onto his father's words as well as he can a flyball (Prov 4:4).

Happy will be the child who cries because his dad loves him (Prov 10:12)

A wise father hates sin in order to love his son.

A good father shows the value of a book as well as a buck.

The dad who wonders how much of a teacher he needs to be would do well to go to the school of Solomon.

The man who finds a good woman should show his son how to avoid a bad one (Prov 2,5,6,7,9).

What a father knows about sex might help his children as much as surprise them (Prov 23:26-8).

A wise son makes a glad dad as much as a foolish one makes a glum mum (Prov 10:1).

Thank God for Fathers who not only gave us life but taught us what to do with it.

If you're amazed at how hard your dad can make it for you, try it without him (Prov 15:5).
